Sonja and 56 residents received Red Cross help after a fire broke out in their building

The day of the fire, Sonja was resting in bed. She got up to look out the door and found herself facing a firefighter. He instructed her to grab important personal items. They needed to evacuate immediately.

“The Red Cross volunteers moved effortlessly and efficiently to make sure everyone’s needs were addressed,” says Sonja. “The Red Cross made those first few hours manageable. I cannot tell you how much we needed organization and support. We were all very worried. They were there for us.”

The residents were able to return to their home one month later.
