DEAR FRIENDS,

As I reflect on our work in Haiti over the past four years, I am very proud of what we have accomplished. Thanks to the support of generous individuals like you, we have provided relief to millions of people and are able to continue to invest in long-term and sustainable recovery operations

Over the past year, I have had the opportunity to make several trips to Haiti. During these visits, I was able to witness first-hand the progress that we continue to make in communities across the country. I am always inspired by our operations on the ground and meeting with families that we have helped.

Because of your support, we have provided relief to millions of people. This includes building safer homes and providing improved health care. All of the help we have provided has been guided by the communities we are serving. These programs, which can be managed and owned by communities for years to come, will help Haitian's build a stronger and healthier future. This report will provide a brief update on our work in these areas.

The Canadian Red Cross was working in Haiti before the earthquake struck and understands the extreme vulnerabilities that have made this operation unique and complex. The road to recovery is long and challenging but we are committed to working alongside communities and the Haitian Red Cross to build a lasting and sustainable recovery.

Thank you again for your support.

Sincerely,

Conrad Sauvé
Secretary General and CEO

BUILDING HEALTHIER COMMUNITIES

As Haiti recovers, the Red Cross is planning for a healthier future for the country. Long-term development in health systems and infrastructure is critical to Haitians' well-being. Over five years, the Canadian Red Cross will invest $35 million in a health program that will improve access to quality health services for mothers, newborns and children, as well as build stronger communities in terms of community-based health and first aid.

This program will work with local and Canadian partners to maximize positive, long-term health outcomes for Haitians. It will rebuild the departmental hospital in Jacmel, which is expected to be completed in March 2015, rehabilitate four health centres, train health care professionals, improve health education at the community level, and strengthen health systems through improved capacity in health program planning, management and evaluation.

Health has been a priority for the Red Cross since day one after the devastating 2010 earthquake. The Red Cross has provided emergency healthcare, vaccinations, clean water and basic sanitation to more than 230,000 people, educated more than 4.3 million people through hygiene promotion activities, and reached more than 2 million people through community-based health and first aid services.

REBUILDING HOMES

As part of overall sheltering efforts, the Canadian Red Cross directly provided longer-term shelter to approximately 7,500 families in and around Jacmel and Leogane. The shelters that were built were dependant on the assessment of needs, land availability, the clearing of debris and other critical issues brought about by such a large-scale disaster.

The Canadian Red Cross has been a major partner in the reconstruction efforts in Haiti and, with support from the Government of Canada, has provided over 19,000 families with safe shelter solutions. The completion of the Canadian Red Cross shelter program therefore marked a major milestone in the recovery efforts.

Canadian donations also funded an additional 9,412 shelter solutions for families through the International Federation of Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies. To meet the growing needs of 279,000 still internally displaced people in Port-au-Prince, the Canadian Red Cross has also supported 2,125 families with cash grants for rent as part of the larger Red Cross resettlement program. The initiative aims to decongest the camps and find safe longer-term shelter solutions for families.

In addition to shelter, the Canadian Red Cross continues to work with other National Red Cross Societies to ensure that the on-going needs of families and their communities are met, such as adequate water and sanitation systems, programs to help people gain employment and proximity to social infrastructure.
